MIGHTY AIR ARMADA STRIKES AT YOKOHAMA; JAPAN'S FIFTH LARGEST CITY IS SET ABLAZE IN A VERY DARING DAYLIGHT SWEEP; TOKYO SMOULDERS FROM 2 BLASTS

Third Time in 6 Days That Sky Giants Have Lashed At The Enemy

TOYODA IS REMOVED

Longer Holds Post As Commander-in-Chief Of "Jap" Fleet

By Julian Hartt

I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

GUAM, May 29—Yokohama was scried today as a blazing inferno with smoke rising to more than 20,000 feet after upwards of 100 Superfortresses staged the first day sky assault against Japan's largest city.

The Superforts, escorted by 150 Mustang fighters, ranged over the city for nearly two hours by daylight today dropping 640,000 pounds of bombs from medium altitude. Returning pilots said visibility was good and described the flames as "in spots." The American planes beat off what interceptors positioned the Japs had to offer. This was the first B-29 smash at Yokohama, lying just twenty miles south of Tokyo which was still smoldering from two terrific air raids last week.

International News Service

Admiral Soemu Toyoda was relieved today from his post as commander-in-chief of the Japanese Navy High Command. The change apparently stemmed from Nippon's desire to check the successful American invasion of Okinawa on the threshold of the Jap home islands.

Toyoda also was replaced as commander-in-chief of the newly established over-all naval command of the naval escorts command.

The Japanese Navy Ministry gave three posts taken away from Toyoda to Vice-Admiral Isaburo Iwano who had been vice-chief of the naval general staff and president of the naval staff college.

MARINES "SIGHT" BIG AIRFIELD

Guam—Okinawa's largest airfield was brought within the gunshots of American Marines today as the Leathernecks completed mopping up practically all of rubble Naha and rolled to the edge of a narrow inlet separating them from Naha airdrome.

As elements of Maj. Gen. Lemuel Shepard's Sixth Marine Division drew up on the northern bank of the 500-yard-wide inlet, only a mile of ground and Nip defenses were between them and the sprawling field. The drome is situated on the peninsula across the bay from Naha.

The Marine guns already were able to play into the town of Kuki-bana, lying on the opposite shore, and the leathernecks can drop even mortar fire into the already heavily bomb-packed airfield.

While these elements of the Sixth Division concentrated on this new target, others of Shepard's troops hammered a wedge of envelopment deeper south of Naha in a continued effort to isolate Shuri. The latter bastion is already cut off from east, north and west.

SYRIA TO REFUSE TREATY WITH FRENCH

London—Syria's determination to refuse to enter into any treaty with the French which would give them privileges or concessions in the Near East was voiced today by Acting Premier Kamil Mardam Bey.

The statement came in the wake of a promise by Egyptian Prime Minister Nokrashy Pasha that Egypt would give its full support to Syria and Lebanon in their dispute with the French.

Reports from Damascus told of various continued instances of violence at different points in Syria. In Damascus itself there were several explosions indicating the use of heavy arms or grenades.

Hope of an early settlement of the dispute between France and the eastern states was based on statements that both Britain and the United States would participate in efforts to seek settlement.

Activities of Interest To All In the Various Communities

CLEANEED BY SCRIBES

Mrs. Emma P. Stover, Doylestown, has received the news that her daughter, Lt. Harriet Stover, veteran Army nurse, who has been in the service for 39 months, most of that time in the South Pacific fighting area, has arrived in the United States and expects to be home in the near future.

It is believed she is on the Pacific coast, and that she probably will remain there to meet her mother.

Croydon Pupils Gather 4 Tons of Paper in Term

CROYDON, May 29—The children of Croydon public school have aided the scrap paper drive during the past school year. The children made a house-to-house canvass with express wagons.

They collected four tons of vitally needed paper. The 356 resulting from the sale of the paper was used in building the school's lending library. One hundred new books were added. Upon returning in the fall the children intend to resume their collections.

ANDALUSIA PROGRAM

ANDALUSIA, May 29—The Memorial Day program here tomorrow, sponsored by the Andalusia Boy Scout Troop Committee, will include a parade, short formal ceremony and contests. The Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and Cubs, will form in line at Mitchell's field at two p. m., marching to the Episcopal Church of the Redeemer for a short ceremony. Continuing through the community they will then go to Morrell's field. There games and contests will be in order, with prizes for the Scouts and Cubs. Refreshments will be served. The populace is invited to witness the events of the day.

1st Lt. Satterthwaite Is Killed at Okinawa

DOYLESTOWN, May 29—A Marine Corps officer who resided in this borough, lost his life in action on Okinawa on May 15th. He is 1st Lt. William Satterthwaite, son of William H. Satterthwaite, Jr., president of Doylestown Trust Co.

Lt. Satterthwaite entered the service when he was a student at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn., and after completing the untailed course there, was sent to Parris Island for his "boot" training and from there to Quantico, Va. He received his commission as second lieutenant in May, 1943.

A letter from Lt. Satterthwaite, written only three days before his death, was received by his family last week.

Lt. Satterthwaite prepared at George School for college and graduated from the school with high academic honors.

He is survived, besides his father, by two sisters, Mrs. Hannah Gross and Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Kohler, and a brother, Edwin H. Satterthwaite.

John J. Marsegia, W. T. 3/c, U. S. N. R., has been promoted to his present rating from fireman 1/c. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Marsegia, Monroe street. Before entering the service he was employed by Manhattan Soap Co. He is now in the South Pacific.

Mrs. Charles Murray, of Fallsington, regrets that she was in error in reporting that the Doster-Murray wedding took place in Bristol Presbyterian Church on Saturday. The ceremony occurred in Zion Lutheran Church, with the pastor, the Rev. Paul R. Ronge, officiating.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc.)

The Cabinet Changes

Washington, May 29—EVERYTHING being relative in this world, it can be fairly said that the Cabinet, as so far revamped by Mr. Truman, looks pretty good. However, that is only in comparison with the Roosevelt Cabinet. The Truman selections do not justify rushing up on the roof to cheer, but they are an improvement.

FOR EXAMPLE, objection is offered to former Senator Schwellenbach as Labor Secretary on the ground that in the Senate he was a New Deal rubber stamp, with strong radical tendencies, and that he was endorsed by the notorious Seattle labor boss—Dave Beck. That does not sound very good, but when one recalls the extreme devotion of Mme. Perkins to all New Deal panaceas and, among various other things, her attitude toward sit-down strikes, etc., it seems that at least the level has not been lowered.

IN THE matter of the Attorney Generalship, the gain is clearer. Here the President found in office a crusading, fanatical official, who actively allied himself with the extreme left wingers and preached a political doctrine of administration, labor combination to the exclusion of business. He replaces him by promoting a Texas lawyer who has spent eight years as Assistant Attorney General, with a good record and conservatively inclined. Politically, he is a protégé of Senator Tom Connally and Speaker Sam Rayburn. Certainly, he is not inherently hostile to industry.

BUT THE biggest hit is in the Agriculture Department. There Mr. Truman not only selected an obviously better equipped man as Secretary but made the changes in the food-control machinery, for which demand had long been made and which certainly were long overdue. He really did more than that. He accepted the resignation of Mr. Marvin Jones as Food Administrator, amalgamated that office with the Secretaryship of Agriculture.

THE TARIFF FIGHT

Newspapers telling about the Trade Agreement arguments in Congress constantly mention the "historic" attitude of the Republican Party and its "traditional" adherence to the principles of protective tariff.

It is quite true that the arguments being made today are almost word-for-word those uttered from the time when the newly-organized Republican Party under its first president, Abraham Lincoln, adopted the protective tariff as an essential plank in its platform.

For instance, the following words would fit smoothly into recent Congressional debates:

"The Democratic proposition is that the American manufacturer and laborer shall be put in ruinous competition with the foreign manufacturer and the underpaid, pauper laborer."

Yet these words were spoken more than sixty years ago. They are quoted from a speech delivered at Chicago on August 23, 1884, by General Logan, campaigning on behalf of Blaine and against Cleveland.

Columns more of the editorials and public speeches of that period would fit quite aptly into today's discussions.

The current New Deal propaganda, which has taken in many who fancy themselves "internationalists" in their point of view, is that these arguments are too hackneyed and shopworn to be worth answering.

The bald fact is that they have never been answered, and cannot be answered.

Further, history itself, by the panics and depressions which have followed every Democratic experiment at tariff reductions and "free trade," has fully vindicated the truth of General Logan's observation.

Cleveland won the election of 1884, and during his two terms slashed tariffs below the protection level.

There followed one of the most disastrous financial collapses of the Nineteenth Century—which ended when McKinley, strong believer in Republican tariff protections, was swept into office by a tide of public reaction.

Wilson cut the tariffs, and as soon as the World War was over and foreign competitors could get ships for their merchandise, the country went into a tailspin.

Meanwhile all other industrial nations—including Great Britain, once the outstanding exponent of "free trade"—adopted the Republican economic theory that home markets must be preserved to maintain domestic standards of living.

Several times since the Civil War the Republican side of the argument has been so overwhelmingly convincing that the Democratic Party itself has largely abandoned free trade or "tariff for revenue only."

Examine the platform upon which President Roosevelt was elected, and you will find that it accepts the principle of protective tariffs—although, of course, violently opposing the Smoot-Hawley version.

It would seem as though truth would be strengthened and sanctified by age. The New Deal view seems to be that truth is a perishable commodity, which runs down like a battery.

Why is it that under the New Deal, and in a world where all other important nations are using tariff or similar protections, we are being told so eloquently and persuasively that we must strip away most of the remaining tariffs as a gesture of goodwill and in the name of jobs, peace and prosperity?

One answer to any such question about New Deal

PROJECT PRESENTS BENSLEM HIGH IN THE FUTURE YEARS

Graduates Show Through Tableaux Their Hopes For High School

60 IN THE CLASS OF '45

P. T. A. Cup Given to Jack Kidd; Runner-Up, Richard Rittenhouse

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, May 29—"Benslem—Present and Future" was the title of the commencement project, presented in tableaux form with narrative, by members of the class of 1945 last evening. This presentation preceded the bestowal of diplomas to a class of 56 young folks, with four additional now serving their country bringing the total to 60.

Presentation of numerous awards also marked the 21st annual commencement, held in the high school auditorium, and witnessed by a large gathering. The tableaux well illustrated the points given by the various narrators, who thus showed present conditions at Benslem Township high school and what, in their opinions, should prevail in the future.

The narrators and their subjects were as follows: Introduction, William Foster; College Preparatory, Penn Salmon; Commercial, Inge

Langhorne Officer Is Liberated from Nazis

LANGHORNE, May 29—Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGrath, of Langhorne Manor, have been informed that their son, Lt. John A. McGrath, a former prisoner of the Germans, is safe.

The Red Cross notified the McGrath family here of his liberation. McGrath is well known as a tennis player and competed in Trenton singles championships and won the annual Rohm & Haas Social Club tournament before entering the Army. He is a graduate of Langhorne-Middletown high school.

A brother, Cpl. Harry McGrath, was recently reported killed somewhere in the Pacific theatre of war. Commissioned a navigator in the Air Corps at San Marcos, Tex., McGrath was first reported missing in May, 1944. Later information revealed he was a prisoner of war in Germany when the plane on which he was serving crashed over enemy territory. In a short letter home, McGrath told his parents he escaped unharmed.

Before becoming a prisoner, McGrath had 13 missions to his credit.

WHAT OUR BOYS ARE DOING TO WIN THE WAR

WITH THE THIRD INFANTRY DIVISION, Seventh Army, Germany, May 29—Pfc. William E. Boffert, 449 Mill street, Bristol, Pa., is a member of the First Battalion of the Third Division's 15th Regiment which has been awarded the Presidential Unit Citation for its action south of Montelimar during the Seventh Army's lightning drive up the Rhone valley from southern France.

The Third Division, was chasing the German 19th Army through the Rhone valley, when the 15th's First Battalion executed a flanking maneuver that boxed a large portion of the German force, knocked out more than 400 vehicles, took more than 500 prisoners and killed a large number of the enemy.

After knocking out one German force, the First Battalion continued northward and captured the important city of Montelimar, situated on the banks of the Rhone and guarding the approaches to Lyon and the enemy's escape route to the Belfort Gap in the Vosges mountains.

The local soldier is entitled to wear the Distinguished Unit Badge, a blue ribbon with gold fringe, over his right breast pocket. As a member of the Third Division he is also entitled to wear the Croix de Guerre fourragere, awarded to the Third by General Charles de Gaulle for the division's work in the Vosges mountain and Colmar pocket campaigns. The Third is the only division awarded the coveted cord of honor in this war.

The 15th's First Battalion has taken part with the Third in seven separate campaigns—French Morocco, Tunisia, Sicily, southern Italy, Anzio-Rome, France and Germany, and has most recently taken part in the crossing of the Rhine and capture of Nurnberg.

ANSWER TO THE CALL

The difference between the final phase of the war in Europe and the current phase of the war in the Pacific illustrates the difference between the kinds of war American forces have to wage—and the American people have to pay for.

In the final phase of the war in Europe, speed was a key factor. American mechanized forces were making gains of a score or more miles a day and bagging German prisoners by thousands.

Things are different in the Pacific. In the current phase of the fighting in the Philippines and on Okinawa, speed plays no part. It is the hardest sort of hand-to-hand slugging. Gains are measured in yards, not miles, and Japanese soldiers battle to the death. They do not eliminate themselves by wholesale surrender in hopeless situations. They have to be eliminated at heavy cost in lives. The Jap soldier is dangerous while he has strength to pull a grenade pin.

There was a price to pay for the speed of the campaign in Germany—a price in money aside from the price in blood exacted by any war anywhere. The American people had to pay for huge quantities of fuel and other supplies in order that mechanized forces could maintain the pace of their advance.

There is a price to pay for the lack of speed in ground operations in the Pacific—a price in money aside from the sacrifices of many American fighting men. When gains are measured in yards instead of miles and when enemy resistance ends only with the killing of the last Jap, the difficulty of the task, the length of time it takes and the price it involves are self-evident.

The American people at home are not called upon to do the actual fighting. They are called upon to pay the price in money the campaign costs. They can answer the call right now. They can make the answer as emphatic as they wish through the Seventh War Loan. It was the answer the fighting men want to hear from home.

SURPLUS GOODS

Value of America's surplus war goods may total more than $25,000,000,000. This will be a weight hanging over manufacturers and dealers in converting to civilian production. It is also a source of worry to workers in industries producing the items which the armed forces have in abundant supply.

Textiles, clothing and shoes not needed by the Army and Navy when the last shot is fired, is estimated, may exceed $4,000,000,000. If these are distributed among civilians in America, factories will employ fewer persons.

If surplus stores of goods abroad are distributed to the natives, exports to those countries will be affected.

Radio Tokyo hasn't put out a "victory" broadcast in several days, indicating that the Nip broadcasters are getting behind in their work.

ture and named as Secretary Congressman Clinton Anderson, of New Mexico, who recently, as head of a House food investigating committee, made a trenchant report to the President pointing out the number of conflicting agencies dealing with food, deploring the confusion and urging the President to "coordinate."

WELL, Mr. Truman not only "coordinated" by making the Secretary of Agriculture also the Food Administrator, which is clearly sensible, but he put the sharp critic of confusion who loudly called for co-ordination in position to cure it if he can—the concededly sick situation to which he points.

NO FURTHER Cabinet changes are expected immediately, though that does not mean that others will not be made eventually. It is true that when asked if Mr. Morgenthau had tendered his resignation, Mr. Truman replied that he had not and if he had he would not have accepted it. And when asked if he contemplated a change in the Secretary of State, he emphatically said: "I do not." But, it is pointed out, these replies do not guarantee Cabinet security for either Mr. Morgenthau or Mr. Stettinius. The President easily might refuse to accept Mr. Morgenthau's resignation on one day but be willing to accept it the next. And the same rule applies to contemplation of a new Secretary of State. And Mr. Truman himself pointed out that he has in his possession the resignation of every important appointive Government official.

THOSE disposed to use every Truman act as a yardstick to determine whether he is moving to the right or to the left will find themselves just where they were before these Cabinet changes were announced, though a conservative Attorney General would seem to somewhat more than balance a radical Labor Secretary. Besides, geographically truing up his official family, the President has strengthened belief that primarily he is interested in efficient government and likes men around him who will work. He is the attitude of a common-sense man who wants to do as good a job as he can.

philosophy is to see where it fits into the Communistic ideology with which so much of the recent Administrative policies have been imbued.

The Trade Agreements program, now being made an administrative issue under President Truman, fits like a glove with the Communistic plan for a social revolution winding up with dictatorship and state-socialism.

This statement will, of course, be violently disputed and denied.

Yet the facts speak for themselves.

Surely no one will deny that Marx was the great founder and exponent of the philosophy we call Communism.

Here is what Marx says about tariffs:

"Generally speaking, the protective system in these days is conservative, while the free trade system works destructively. It breaks up old nationalities and carries antagonism of proletariat and bourgeoisie to the uttermost point. In a word, the free trade system hastens the social revolution."

How many Americans will echo Marx in supporting the Administration's tariff proposals for the interesting reason that they cannot work; that they will produce large-scale social, economic and industrial distress; and that therefore they will hasten the collapse of our present government and its replacement by a dictatorship?

Roast ham at 300° F. Make mush of 1/2 cup corn meal and 2 cups milk. Stir in 4 beaten eggs. Bake at 350° F. in ham drippings.

Toast split buns or English muffins. Cover with thin slices of ham. Place poached egg on top of ham, with Hollandaise sauce over all.

Bake cornbread or shortcake. Make creamed ham, stretching it with hard egg and diced celery. Serve between and over cornbread or shortcake.

The above table bears out the old adage that "Where there's a will there's a way." In this instance it applies to the question of stretching the limited supply of meat that Mrs. Housewife is able to buy under wartime rationing. Here are just a few ideas that may be used in preparing three different pork cuts — sausage, chops, hocks or knuckles, and ham — to make the meat go further. There are many other appetizing ways to extend pork, as well as beef and lamb.

CHAPTER TWENTY

Something he couldn't remember experiencing for many years — hunger possibly since the smells from the hamper were ambrosiac — surged through Steve's system. "This is pretty fine, but you shouldn't..."

"Why shouldn't I?" she asked reasonably, whisking tops from hot casseroles. "... And soon they sat down to dine by candlelight. They'd got to the after dinner coffee, while Steve said "Lucius" and "Horatio" were on the road to recovery.

Daphne exclaimed, "Oh, the guinea pigs! May I see them?" They went into the laboratory and presently Daphne saw a tub full of bottles and test-tubes that was stuck away under the bench. "Just some stuff that has to be washed sometime."

"It will be washed right now," Daphne announced, getting into her white duck coat, ignoring all protests. "It was ten when the job was finished and they were putting things away in the refrigerator, when she saw a bottle of champagne tubbed in ice therein."

"Something I saved for an occasion," he said. "I got it out today. Thought you might like some." "Did love it, Steve. Let's have a big, blazing fire to go with it." The fire was soon lit and blazing, and the wine cool and filled with golden bubbles. Lifting his glass, Steve saw her face framed in a golden circle. It seemed sweetly sinister, her eyes dangerously so, and yet he wanted to tell her about the time when he'd bought the champagne, and why. It was one of those rare moments when he thought he'd come to the end of his scientific search. But that faded, so he'd put the bottle away and never thought of it again, until he'd awakened that morning when Daphne was to come to the laboratory in the afternoon. He ended his champagne story with, "We've talked enough of it and me. Where did Mrs. Alvezzi learn to drink wine?"

For several moments, Daphne mused at the fire, her chin in hand, her eyes dreaming up visions, her memory flicking over the fairy tales she'd written into letters for years and years. "It was first in London," she said — she who had seldom tasted champagne until this night — the night when Carlo gave a toast. Have you ever been to London, Steve?" He said once or twice. Better let London alone.

"To the Riviera?" "No." Daphne began to speak nostalgically of the Riviera. The sweet moan of strings under star-lit skies, the tinkle of laughter in the bright casino, the sentinel cypress, the sparkling sands, and people and yet more people whose names were only names to her. It was a lyrical picture of a life that had no real meaning. A life that she had glimped from its outmost fringes. "You loved it?" "Certainly," she said. "Let me tell you about Paris."

Daphne put no brakes on her imagination; she was intoxicated by her own words, rather than by the wine, and she never realized that every word was like another mile widening the road between her and the scientist.

Steve hated that gay world of which she spoke so lovingly. He scorned the life she painted with glowing phrases. He knew that it had robbed him of precious years, and very nearly cost him his ideals. He said nothing of that to Daphne, and their Thanksgiving dinner ended on a smiling, but secretly somber basis. There was no kiss to mark their parting that night.

Sleighbells jingled through the house like merry laughter. It took her two days to round them up, but the effect was worth the effort. There were two sets of them jingling madly at quarter past four, one at the back door when Mrs. Gates went to see how the ice-cream was coming along, and the other when Minnie Fiske's Petunia, loaned for the occasion, opened the front door to admit two youths, advertised as "The Chocolate Drops."

Daphne—slightly faint with apprehension that her guests had mistaken the time, and were already arriving, peered over the stair-rail—saw that it was only her two young musicians, and retired to her room to finish dressing.

While she tried for the eleventh time in two days to decide whether to wear the glamorous sleek crepe, or the girlish checked taffeta, her mind bounced from pleasure to conscience, and there she was, staring at the two dresses on the bed, getting nowhere at all. It was great fun giving a party, but the extravagance had to be considered, and then she wondered why she was giving the party at all.

It was, this New Year's Day affair, in a sense, Buff's idea. And while Persis Goodhue, society editor of Tommy Dennison's newspaper, would exhaust her superlatives in describing it as "a social affair without equal in the annals of North Wintridge Society," it was, in Daphne's mind, better classed under the heading of tactical moves.

A party, goodness knows, was the last thing in her mind a week ago when a small Christmas tree and a wreath on the front door were her only festive signs. Now there was a huge tree in the dining-room, yards of laurel festoons twined over balustrade and doors, and heaped over mantles. There were clusters of gold and silver balls hung with the greens on light sconces, and red candles flickered in every window. Christmas had come, if a trifle belatedly, to Daphne's house.

It had all happened after the little talk Buff and Daphne had had in Buff's house the night of the younger girl's Christmas dance.

"I hate these big shindigs," Buff deprecated. "But I can put up with a lot of things I don't like, to get what I do."

What Buff did want was Perry Dawson who it seemed, was to be treated to a little competition to jog him out of his role of mere friend. "The method has whiskers," Buff said, "But it still works. Perry knows I'm always around when he wants me, and that's bad. I'm bringing up the reserves. It's a Princeton Dream Boy who obviously adores me, and if that doesn't make young Dawson blink his sandy eye-lashes, nothing will."

"Are you sure he'll come? He's refused dinner invitations, you know." "I know, but men like parties just as much as girls. Besides, male psychology runs to thinking there's safety in numbers. He knows I'm not likely to propose to him when I've got a hundred and fifty people on my hands to be entertained."

That was the germ. It flowered when Alan telephoned from Washington a day later to say that he was getting a brief leave and would Daphne join him in New York for a celebration on New Year's night? That was when she found herself saying, "No; come here. I'm giving an egg-nog ring party New Year's Day. Ring up Corinne. Maybe you two can motor up together."

That was the way it began, with Alan and Corinne, and now there were many more coming—and Dr. Stephan Fenwick.

Steve. When she thought of him—and when did she not?—she was never quite sure whether she wanted to throw things or just have a good cry.

Steve treated her as impersonal as if they had never laughed together as they did on Thanksgiving night. Earlier in that evening he had been fun, and they'd found a kind of intimacy at their holiday dinner, but, after a while—after Daphne had done her best to be entertaining—he had retreated again into his natural aloofness.

Sometimes she'd thought of quitting her laboratory work with him. It wasn't easy to love a man and be near him, and be made to feel about as important as a lesser piece of lab equipment.

Daphne had been almost shy about extending her invitation to the New Year's party, and she was astounded when Steve accepted it promptly.

Maybe Buff had the right idea. Not that Daphne would try the ancient trick of trying to make Steve jealous. ... Nevertheless she wondered if Alan wouldn't be extraordinarily attractive in his blue and gold uniform.

Daphne decided to wear the sleek black crepe with her sapphire clips.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

The dining room was directly below the madly tapping of her toe. Daphne could see it in her mind's eye: The big cherry wood table covered with her spidery Milanesa lace cloth. The center piece of red carnations and white carnations. The white tapers in silver candelabra. Her exquisite Orrefors crystal gleaming in the light, the stacks of Royal Worcester plates, her grandmother's thin silver.

All day long the aroma of cooking foods had mingled with the sharper smells of pine and spruce, and burning logs, making an enticing thing with which to fill a house. There would be a pale pink ham in a fruit glaze, and smoked turkey, and delectable things bubbling in the chafing dishes, fresh lobster in white wine, and creamed oysters. Tiny potatoes were in cream and dusted with chives, and there was cucumber and pineapple in a shimmering emerald green jelly, and pots of cheese-in-wine, and silver shells filled with buttered nuts and bonbons.

Later there would be tiny cakes crusted with crystallized rose and violet petals, and pistachio ice-cream in raspberry ice, and tiny cups of hot, black coffee. It was all "really very simple," as she had told Steve. As unpretentious as though she were expecting the Secretary of State and all the South American ambassadors to drop in for dinner.

Downstairs there was slight pandemonium; the younger Chocolate Drop let out a practice scale on his concertina, the clock struck half-past five, the telephone and doorbell rang simultaneously.

Daphne managed to answer the telephone and get to the door before the maid and opened it to let in Steve who, she said gaily, was "just the right person to arrive first." Egg-nog called for expert making. Could he oblige?

She led the way to her study, chatting about people who were coming; and when he remarked, "Thought you planned this long ago," she said no, plainly; that she had decided only when she heard Alan Pembroke was able to come.

And that was how she found herself doing the one thing she hoped she wouldn't do, deliberately set out to make him conscious of Alan's interest in her.

Steve checked eggs, cream, milk, sugar and brandy and said he'd get right to work. "Not until you have an apron. You look handsome today, Dr. Fenwick." (Extra handsome, she thought, in his dark blue suit and maroon tie.) "I'll only be a minute."

He was standing on the door sill, spoon in hand, when she came back. "Put your head down, Steve. I'll have to slip this over your head." But Steve did not bend his head. His eyes were fixed above him. Daphne looked up and observed, "Aren't those little white berries pretty? I found them in the lower field." She knew her eyes were dancing and she knew that, if he looked into them, he'd see that she knew the little white berries were mistletoe.

But the admiration in his eyes was for the millwork of the old door frame, the handsome carving of another day. "You don't find things like that in new houses," he declared.

"Like mistletoe," she said, "I thought it was an ageless custom." "Mistletoe?"

Steve cocked an eyebrow at it, then dropped his glance to hers. "Was he laughing at her? Daphne felt guilty, and knew he knew it. So she confessed: "Yes."

He looked up again, stared about the ceiling for some time, and said nothing. ... Suddenly the doorbell rang furiously.

Three or four people arrived, and then three or four more, and soon Daphne was too busy introducing people, seeing that wraps were put away, etc., to let herself explode over Steve's stoical indifference to the mistletoe tradition.

Anyway, Daphne decided, about ten minutes later, that she would not allow herself to be angry with Dr. Fenwick. It wasn't his fault that he didn't feel that way about mistletoe. She'd go on working with him, continuing to offer him the friendship of which he was so rightly suspicious, and from this moment on she'd try to forget her tender feelings. But right now, she felt it would be easier if he were not in the same room with her.

That wish was a pale replica of itself when Alan—nothing less than breath-taking in his uniform—arrived at half-past six and, unmindful of all the others, took her in his arms, gave her a squeeze, a big-g kiss, broadcasting "Darling!" in a detonating tone.

Daphne had hoped for a little mild ardor, but when she released herself and saw Steve's eyes on her, she was truly appalled.

"You must be starved!" she exclaimed, pulling Alan into the dining room. "Starved for a sight of you!" he boomed, loud enough to be heard throughout the county.

Daphne's face was flaming, but she was cool enough about seeing that everyone was served. Corinne had annexed Steve and it wasn't until Alan led the way that Daphne saw they were about to make a foursome in the corner of the stairs.

"I've been hearing much about Washington of late," Steve remarked to Corinne.

"Yes, my dear. I've just come back from there. People seem to have pots of money in Washington these days. And that's where you come in, Daphne," Corinne chattered.

"Yes, I've just been telling Dr. Fenwick that, if I open a shop there, I want you to take over for me. I told him I thought you'd be tired of your own home-making experiment by now. Didn't I, Doctor?"

LAY CLOTHES

Mary Jacoby Fleetham (Economics Representative) Sheets—Children's under- no hard to buy these days, made from old muslin. Make for boys, petticoats and pants for a little girl. Linen—Old linen makes the kinds of infants' clothing. inner-sized napkins can be to tiny dresses and sacques. Dish Toweling—Partly worn may be used to make bibs n suits. Shirts—Papa's old shirt is partly worn can make sister a perky blouse—recut and trim with narrow lace. Will wear better and longer than some of the present new materials.

Dress shirt can be made into white panties for three-year size. Butterick No. 1331, good style, allows free action.

Striped man's shirt can be cut into a neat sun suit for a little boy.

Old Trousers—If not suitable, may be cut down for small boy. Men's suiting materials are durable and may be used for little girls' skirts and jackets.

Old Suit—Thinking ahead—a worn suit makes a perfect snow suit for size 3-4. With a bit of hand work, a most attractive suit may be made. Try Butterick No. 2736.

Sweaters—Somewhat worn adult sweaters can be cut down for a small child. If seams are stitched several times on the sewing machine it will wear well. Crocheting around the neck will make a neat finish. If knitted garments can be unraveled, then washed, a new garment can be knitted.

Purchase of New Garments Check the following when considering children's garments:—

1. Size—Allow for shrinkage in cotton, also for growth. If purchased too large are uncomfortable for a child.

2. Color—Children are sensitive to color, choose with care, but garments that are bright and attractive.

3. Style—Simple, straps snapped or buttoned into place for comfort. Style intended for use of garment. Little children like to dress like their parents.

Several grown-up styles are suitable for children. For your daughter try Simplicity No. 1296 sundress and bolero jacket.

Purchase of Materials For Play Clothes

1. Shrinkage—buy only cotton for children's garments. If not pre-shrunk, do so before making.

2. Color Fastness—means fastness to light and washing and perspiration.

3. Finish—permanent glaze or stiffness will mean longer wear and will resist soil.

4. Kinds of Materials.

Ticking, the same type used for pillows, is excellent for play clothes—for shorts, overalls, etc. Now comes in colors and small patterns.

Denim is still available and in different weights, and is suitable for play garments. Durable and tough.

Broadcloth is available and excellent for dresses and shirts, but expensive so should be reserved for "good clothes."

Unbleached muslin is available and while not very attractive in itself, if trimmings are used wisely, garments can be most attractive.

Seersuckers are available, durable and light in weight.

Gingham—Available in some localities—good stand-by for children's garments.

Sharkskin, jerseys, rayon mixtures may be suitable for dress clothes, but are not advised for play garments.

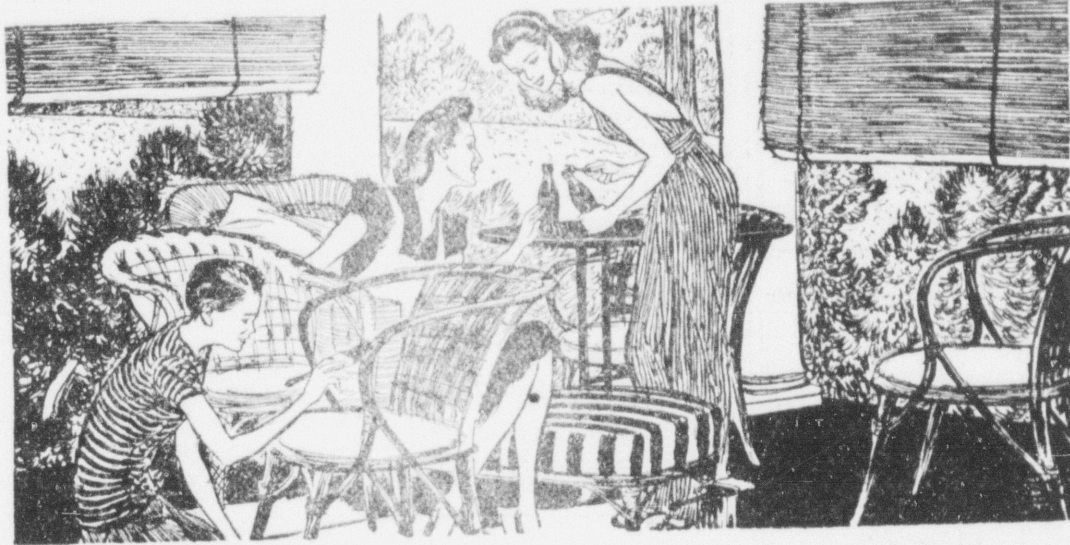

PITTSBURGH—(INS)—Keys may be a bother to some people

NOW, AFTER V-E DAY...

What about Telephone Service?

SINCE V-E DAY—if your emotions have had a chance to cool and if you are among those who are waiting for telephone service—you have undoubtedly wondered how much longer you'd have to wait.

We wish we could say. As of this moment, however, V-E Day did not increase your chances of getting telephone service.

Not soon, that is . . . not immediately.

Here's the picture on telephone instruments alone—only one important item among the hundreds we need:

First, the waiting lists now include more than 125,000 Pennsylvanians.

Second, while we have been receiving telephone instruments at the rate of 2,500 a month, the waiting list is growing at the rate of 5,900 a month.

But that's only the mathematical picture on one small item.

Think of the mighty job of installation . . . of construction . . . of laying miles of cable under city streets and along country roads . . . of fitting switchboards and other intricate central office equipment into the living mechanism that is the telephone system.

So there's the picture as of today. We'd like to be in a position to make definite promises. We can't. It's utterly impossible for us to guess; for, in the final analysis, we don't know any more than you do.

You may count on this, though: Everything we get—everything we can lay our hands on—will be applied at once to lessen your waiting time. We don't like to keep anyone waiting for telephone service.

Afghans, Other Presents, Given Hospitalized Men

Bristol Chapter, American War Mothers, visited Valley Forge General Hospital yesterday afternoon. Chairman Mrs. Charles Locke and her committee, Mrs. Robert Moss, Mrs. John Fraser, Mrs. Harry Goheen, Mrs. Frank Wolfinger, Mrs. Robert Van Aken and Mrs. Milton Dyer, made the trip.

Two knitted afghans were presented to the boys; and a guitar which was donated to the chapter was also given one of the patients, as was also an electric razor.

Home-made apple pies, cake, cookies; oranges, and hard candy, were served; and comic books, magazines, puzzles, cigarettes and playing cards were distributed throughout the wards.

The mothers visited William Hardy, Bristol, and John McDade, Croydon, both patients at the hospital.

The chapter requests that anyone who has any musical instrument that they would like to donate to be given to boys in Valley Forge Hospital or the Philadelphia Naval Hospital, phone Mrs. Moss, 3224, or Mrs. Locke, 2852, and they will arrange to call for same.

3 New Rose Dawn Plants

Please enclose 25 cents to help cover packing, postage, advertising and handling expense

This week is your last chance to get your three lovely new Rose Dawn Perennial plants. Now is ideal time to get them out. Offer positively ends Saturday. These are the new flowers you have been hearing about through radio stations, newspapers and the garden magazines of the country. They grow two to three feet high and bear literally hundreds of beautiful silver pink flowers. Fine for cutting or for yard decoration.

We want you to have three of these unusual flowers to transplant in your yard so you can see what strong healthy flowers we raise. Current catalog value 60 cents. You may have three selected hardy specimens, shipped postpaid for 25 cents incidental expense as above.

Mr. and Mrs. Rob't Ruehl Mark 25th Anniversary

The Travel Club home, Cedar street, was the scene of a delightful affair Saturday evening when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ruehl, Cedar street, entertained a number of friends in celebration of their 25th wedding anniversary.

The club room was decorated in silver and white. A catered dinner was served to 50 guests.

Ernest Gamble served as toastmaster, and introduced the following entertainers: Verna Page, violinist, accompanied by Mrs. Marguerite G. Weagley, pianist; Roy G. Howell, comedy speaker; Miss "Peggy" Arnold, musical act, accompanied by Keith Rosser at the piano.

Group singing was enjoyed and a social time followed.

By Rev. Bickley Burns Broadhead
Pastor
Bensalem Methodist Church

Our Heavenly Father, we would wait upon Thee this day in remembrance of all those who have made the supreme sacrifice. Make us who follow after them worthy of their valour. We would remember the fellowship of broken hearts still anguished because of loneliness tempered in the fires of affliction. Fill all hours of loneliness with sweetness of memories in which there are no regrets, and with the strength of a faith which discerns Thy love within and above our pain. We would pray in Jesus spirit. Amen.

NEWS EVENTS

Dear Joe

And so for the duration I have given up frilly frocks and am trim in khaki. I'm thrilled with headlines about the war in Europe. But you're in the Pacific—and the war won't be over for us until the rising sun goes down.

We can't think of our war successes in terms of successful engagements—without counting the toll in dying and wounded men. If I, as a Medical Department WAC, can help make the "Road Back" less difficult for even only one battle-scarred veteran, then I am truly worthy of my great heritage as an American.

Although I am completely inexperienced, the Army is giving me free technical training for a selected job—training that will do a job today and be invaluable in the glorious tomorrow.

I know you are proud of me and . . .

ARROWS NOSE OUT PRISON OFFICERS IN GAME PLAYED HERE

Fleetwings Nine Defeats Trenton Team by Score of 4 to 3

BINTCLIFFE RELIEVED

Pluma Took Over Pitching Job as Shades of Night Began to Fall

The Fleetwings Arrows climbed to within a game of fourth place in the Trenton Industrial League by losing out to the Prison Officers, 4-3, last evening on Leedom's field. It was the second straight win for the airplane workers.

Manager "Johnny" Mulholland used Benny Bintliffe at the start of the tilt last night and when the shades of the evening began to fall, he put in "Herm" Pluma and his fast ball. Pluma retired the side in the seventh with a batter reaching base on a walk.

But Bintliffe did a fine job on the hill. He limited the visiting Jersey team to four hits, all singles. He had one bad frame when a single, a hit batsman, and an error by Bintliffe himself gave the Guards a pair of runs and a temporary lead. Bintliffe had six strikeouts to his credit.

The Arrows won the game by scoring three runs in the fifth. Lyczak opened with a single and Tosti followed with a two-bagger. Sagolia was sent in to run for Tosti. Fine fled out but both Barbetta and D'Ascendis came through with singles while Frappoli ended the inning by grounding out.

The Bristol boys had scored a run in the second on a hit by D'Ascendis, a fielder's choice, and a single by Fred Clott.

The acquisition of Barney Frappoli, of Florence, and D'Ascendis, of Burlington, aided the winners, both with the stick and defensively.

FALLS GIRLS WIN 8, AND LOSE 1 GAME

This year, the first year of girls' softball in Fallsington, proved for the Lassies a very successful season. Under the able coaching of Miss Naomi Reed, the girls came through with eight wins, suffering only one defeat.

The Lassies have clinched second place in the Bucks County Girls' Softball League. The loss to Southampton put the girls out of first place running. Due to the one-game schedule, one loss puts the team out of the win column.

The Lassies have played very capably this season. They scored 217 points to their opponents 34.

Fallsington defeated: Morrisville, 48-9; New Jersey Deaf School, 23-0; Newtown, 24-10; New Hope, 17-2; Langhorne, 16-5; Buckingham, 21-3; Bristol, 27-3; Hunter's, 16-6. They lost only to Southampton, 8-5.

Although various girls acted as game captains throughout the season, Laura Bacher was elected honorary captain.

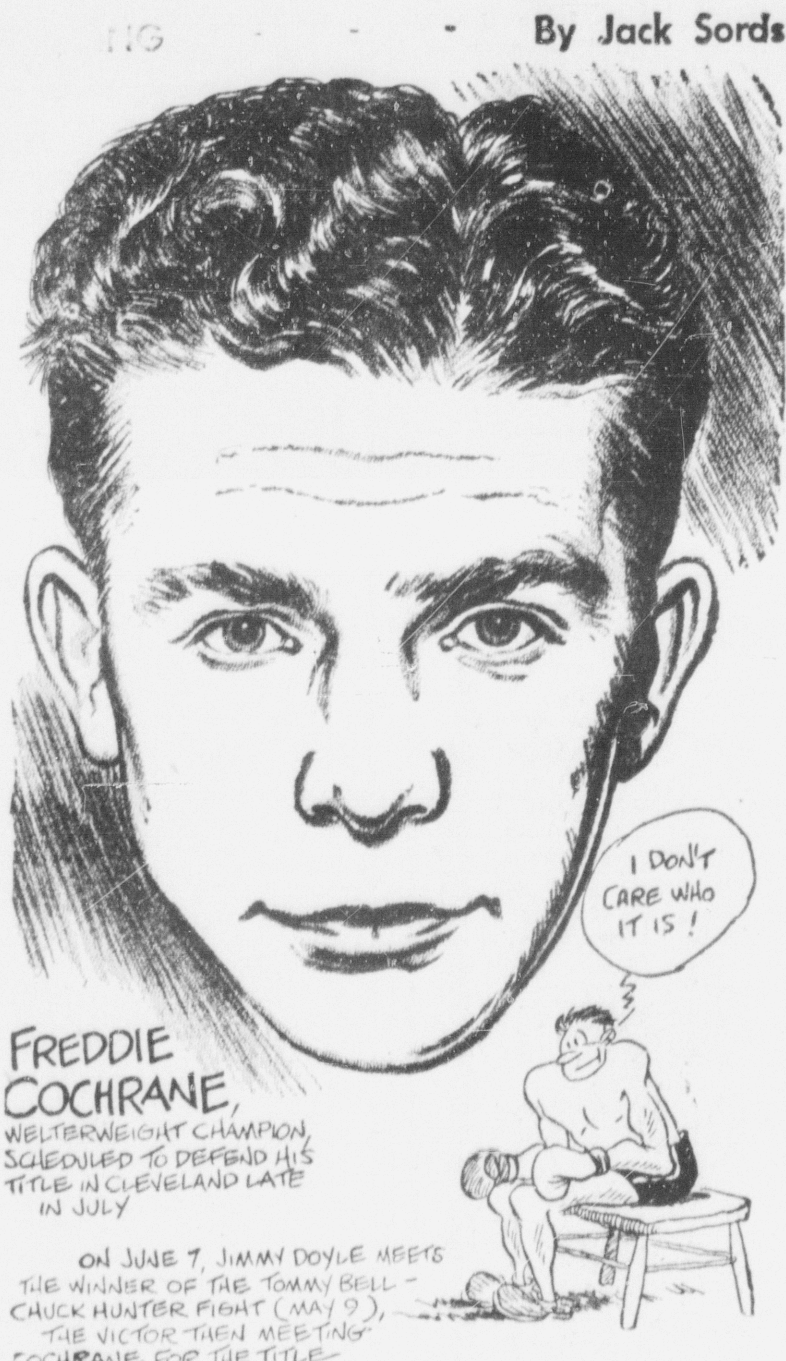

It was definitely the co-operation, teamwork and skill on the part of the coach and the girls that made the season so successful for the Lassies.

Golf Privileges To Be Extended Servicemen

DOYLESTOWN, May 29—Service in the armed forces of the United States in World War No. 2, on the part of members of the Doylestown Country Club, will be rewarded by a year's honorary membership in the club upon discharge from the service.

This action was taken last week at a meeting of the executive committee of the club.

The club has 30 members eligible for the honorary membership reward, including both men and women. At the same time another regulation growing out of the war was authorized, when it was decided to extend the privilege of the local golf course to all Doylestown and nearby men and women in the service, if they are properly introduced by a member of the club. The same privilege will be extended to service men and women who may be guests of members, who may be from other sections of the country.

VOLTZ AND FLEETWINGS TO OPEN NEW BALL FIELD HERE IN THE GAME ON LEEDOM'S FIELD TOMORROW NIGHT

The two local members of the Trenton Industrial League, Voltz and Fleetwings, will be pitted against each other tomorrow evening on Leedom's field. The game will also mark the dedication of the renovated Leedom's field and a flag-raising ceremony will take place. New seats and a new backstop were recently erected on the diamond.

At the present time, Voltz is in second place in the circuit with the Arrows resting in fifth place. But the Arrows recently found their stride and have won the last two games played, beating the Prison Officers in both contests.

It is most likely that "Herm" Pluma and "Mike" DeRisi will be the opposing hurlers in the contest. Left on bases, Fleetwings 4, Guards 1. Struck out by: Hess 2, Bintliffe 9, Pluma 1. Base on balls by: Hess 2, Bintliffe 2, Pluma 1. Winning pitcher: Pluma. Umpires: McNamara and Mendis. Scorer: Rosser.

GAME TOMORROW

The Bristol Township school nine and the Third Ward teams will play tomorrow afternoon on the township field in a Bristol Youth League game. The tilt was originally scheduled for two weeks ago, but was called off because the Township nine was invited to see the A's play in Philadelphia.

Project Presents Bensalem High in The Future Years

The narrations were prepared and presented by the persons named, with the exception of the College Preparatory and Commercial narrations, which were written by Harry Schaffer and Lillian Keates, respectively.

By means of numerous tableaux in which most of the graduates participated, with the spotlight bringing first one then another into focus, the graduates showed in a more comprehensive way than by words alone, the need for more individualized training, the need for separate gymnasium and auditorium, more musical instruments, additional subjects to better fit the young people to meet future requirements, and many other things.

At the conclusion of the project the high school orchestra played two numbers, "Graduation Overture" (Herfurth) and "Serenade" (Toselli).

The processionals was the march from the opera "Norma" (Bellini), the graduates in gray caps and gowns making their way to seats reserved at the front of the auditorium. The Rev. George Tibbets, pastor of Doe Run Church, the first Bensalem Alumnus to be ordained to the ministry, offered prayer.

A large number of awards were made last evening. The J. Hamilton Bushnell courtesy award was presented by John Diamond, recipient of the 1944 award, to Charlotte Vinson. This award is given to the high school student who is

COFEE'S HOME RUN WITH BAGS LOADED DEFEATS VOLTZ IX

Bristol Nine Loses To The American Steel Team By Score of 6 to 1

Drive to Right Field Made Only Score for The "Gas" Men

TRENTON, N. J., May 29—"Moe" Coffee's home run with the bags loaded gave the American Steel team its 10th straight win of the Trenton Industrial League last evening on Wetzel field as the Steelers beat the Voltz-Texaco nine, 6-1.

Coffee's drive over the right-field wall came after Jones had reached base on an error, Linder walked, and Kuzma beat out an infield roller to pack the sacks with Steelmen. "Parrot" Dick was hurling for the Voltz-men at the time.

The only run scored by the losers was a home-run drive to right field by "Eddie" Sullivan. It was Sullivan's second four-base ply of the season, both coming at Wetzel field.
